The Web folder contains the application-related backend logic for the Inertiajs app, while the Api folder contains the API-specific controllers. As you can see, each of those folders is namespaced by domains. Since both of these applications use middlewares, I left them in the Http folder. I find this setup very easy to understand and a joy to maintain. There's no unnecessary complexity.

By the way, the Console application is also namespaced by domains: