It's quite easy. A sequence mail is very similar to a broadcast; it also has:

- Subject line
- HTML content
- JSON filters

A sequence is just a "container" with a name and status. But it's important because only published sequences can send e-mails to subscribers. And as we've discussed earlier, each sequence mail becomes a row in the `sent_mails` table after it was sent.